Did you Know?

Newborn babies have no tears.

Whilst your baby will howl and scream to get what they want or need, they won't theoretically cry. Newborn babies are unable to produce tears until around three weeks of age – this is because their tear ducts are not fully developed at birth. They will always produce moisture to keep the eyes well lubricated and healthy, but there will be no proper tears shed at least for the first 3-4 weeks. Phew!

JOHNNY APPLESEED DAY!

Happy Johnny Appleseed Day! This week Wise Tails (4) and Swift Paws (3) joined together to celebrate. We did different activities such as made apple pie play dough, Apple washing station, Apple painting and Apple volcano!
